Governor Scores "Social Prunes" Who Take Up Anarchy as Fad

BUT ALSO URGES CALMNESS

Interesting News Items, Briefly Condensed, Picked Up at the Departments, Which Are of Interest to the People of the State.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Governor Sproul, speaking at the annual dinner of the Philadelphia group of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association in Philadelphia, said he was in full accord with Attorney General Palmer in undertaking "the most complete and comprehensive effort in the history of the Republic to rid the nation of its enemies" and in letting all know that the "national organization is not a helpless governmental jellyfish which cannot defend itself against the parasites who would destroy it."

"There are some people of old American stock whose mental perversion takes the shape of encouraging enemies of the republic. These social prunes, wind-dried and heat-wrinkled, have taken up those doctrines as a fad and with the hope of acquiring some sort of notoriety as a part of a revolutionary cult. If the district attorneys of the State will do their full duty they will get more notoriety than they desire."

"But strong as our feelings may be in this direction we must not talk recklessly or inconsiderately of conditions about us. It will not do to call every man a 'Red' who wants to better his social condition and that of his family and who asks for higher wages and better working conditions. Nor will it do to brand as Bolsheviks those who protest at being robbed by conscienceless profiteers in the necessities of life or by being obliged to live in rotten houses at exorbitant rents. We must help in remedying these things. If we carelessly smother the ambitions of our people and call them names we will make these names popular. Radicalism isn't necessarily unpatriotic if it is aimed at injustice."

State Workmen's Insurance Fund.

Pennsylvania's State Workmen's Insurance Fund has a premium income of approximately $3,000,000 during the year just closed and started off 1920 with fewer cancellations than at the commencement of 1919, according to officials of the State Fund. The statement was made that the amount of new business is in excess of previous years and it is declared that most of the revenue that has gone into the surplus fund can hereafter be available for the payment of dividends. The fund officials say that the fund now has assets of $4,000,000 with $2,000,000 surplus and that its premium income has risen from $800,000 to nearly four times that sum.

Standard Tests for Milk and Cream.

The State Department of Agriculture announced that a standard test for butter has would be put into effect for milk and cream sold in Pennsylvania without delay and that close supervision would be maintained. The State has registered 238 milk and cream plants and licensed forty-six official testers. Secretary of Agriculture Basmussen announced that the old plan of dealers electing their own tests would be abolished and the State standard as a guide for payment on the butter fat content adopted.

Third Place for Potato Raising.

According to figures issued by the statistical bureau of the Department of Agriculture, Pennsylvania is a close competitor with Wisconsin and Minnesota for third place as a potato raising state. New York is first and Michigan second. This State is credited with 26,000 bushels.

Governor's Advice to Teachers.

Governor Sproul's advice to teachers to take a greater interest in politics to the end he made to the State Teachers' association at Harrisburg, Pa., attracted much comment and the teachers are likely to follow him.

Excess Tickets in State Armories.

General Henry has heard of a number of instances wherein tickets were issued to memory of men who died in the war and are being put on the market. Several prominent citizens have participated in these phoney ceremonies which do much toward strengthening local military traditions.

Revoke Driver's Automobile License.

The State Highway Department has revoked the paid driver's automobile license of Clark Cover, Shippenburg, for a year because of conviction of reckless driving.

Do Not Contain Wood Alcohol.

State health authorities have received numerous certificates from manufacturers of various drug preparations to the effect that they did not contain wood alcohol. The number being registered is a surprise to officials here.

Old Friends are True Friends

The man, who loves a dog and a pipe, has two staunch friends that never fail him in good luck or in bad. They give all and ask nothing in return. Day by day they become nearer and dearer to him. The man who has not a dog and a pipe has missed two of the greatest things this good old world can give.

Every man who loves his pipe should know Velvet, the one tobacco that brings out all of a pipe's best and sweetest qualities. Your pipe takes on an added friendliness from Velvet's choice Kentucky leaf aged in the wood to a mellowness that's rich and smooth as cream.

Your pipe takes on a mild sweetness that is Velvet's natural tobacco sweetness. And around you hovers the real tobacco fragrance that all good pipe smokers love.

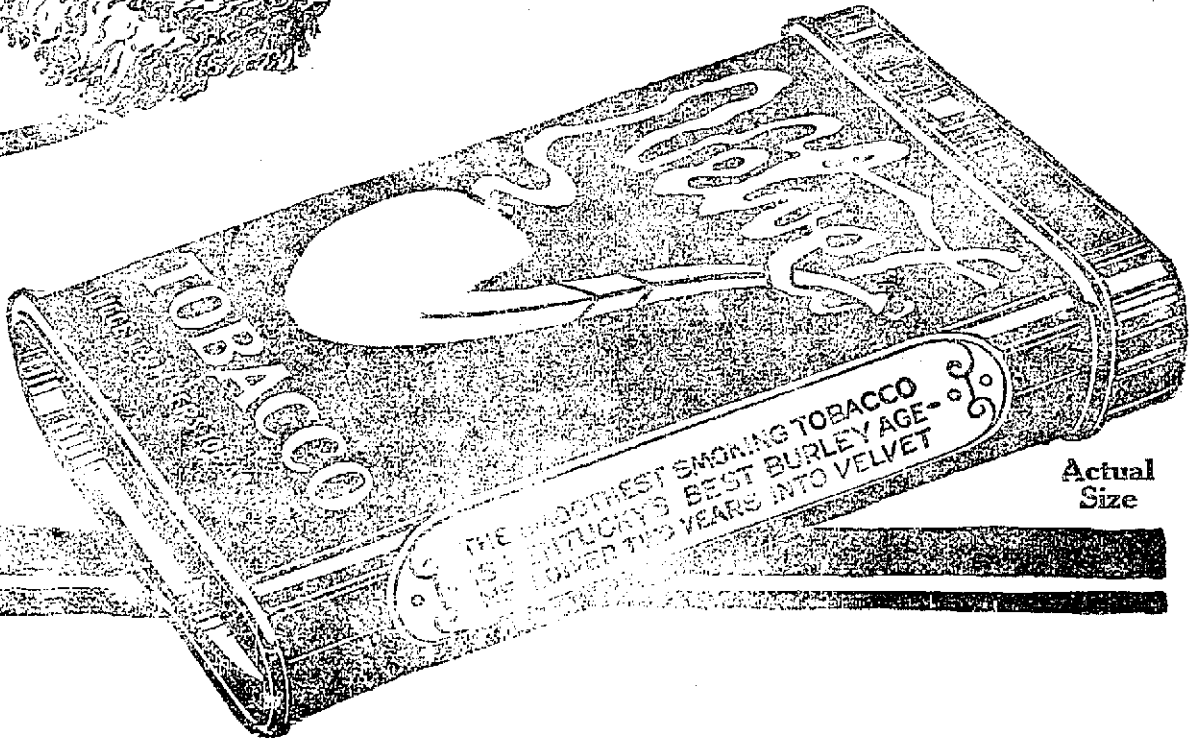

Never did Velvet Joe say a wiser, truer thing than this:

"Folks say you can't buy friendship. You can buy a dog and a pipe and good old Velvet—and I reckon no man ever had three better friends."

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

There's a lot of pipe-loads in every big generous tin of Velvet, and every pipe-load is good tobacco at its best

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. F. B. FITZWALKER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.) (Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR JANUARY 25

PETER STANDS UP FOR TRUTH AND HONESTY.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 5:1-16. GOLDEN TEXT—Lying lips are abomination to the Lord; but they that deal truly are his delight.—Prov. 12:22. ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Ex. 20:16; Prov. 11:1; Matt. 6:2-4; Gal. 6:7, 8; Eph. 4:15, 25, 30. PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling the Truth. JUNIOR TOPIC—Two Disciples and What Became of Them. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Folly and Sinfulness of Lying.

In this lesson we see the new community now called "the church" (v. 11) vindicated. In the boldness of Peter and John we see that the break with Judaism has come—the authority of the Sanhedrin is repudiated with the determination on the part of the disciples to be led by the Holy Spirit. It is for this reason that the body now gets the name "church." Since the break has come it must be shown to be a holy body; it must have recognition as being sacred. The sanctity of the tabernacle is transferred to the new body, which is God's dwelling place (Eph. 2:19-22). The church itself, as well as the people about, did not know this until God's judgment burst forth.

I. Characteristics of the Primitive Church (4:31-35).

1. It was a praying church (v. 31). For every want and every need they betook themselves to God in prayer.
2. It was a Spirit-filled church (v. 31). A praying church is a Spirit-filled church. The Spirit is given in answer to prayer (Luke 11:13).
3. It was a church which had great boldness in preaching the Word of God (v. 31). The minister in a Spirit-filled church will not offer an apology for the Bible, but will fearlessly preach it.
4. It was a united church (v. 32). They were "of one heart and one soul."
5. It was a charitable and generous church (v. 32). As needs arose supplies were given from a common fund.
6. Its ministers had a powerful testimony (v. 33).
7. It was a church whose membership exhibited unblemished characters (v. 33). For "great grace was upon them all."

II. The Sin of Ananias and Sapphira (vv. 1-11).

1. Its occasion (vv. 1, 2). This was their hypocritical imitation of the generous act of Barnabas (4:36, 37). Because of the peculiar distress of the early church when the open rupture was made with Judaism, the members for a time had a "community of goods." This was not universal nor permanent; some continued to own their own homes, as for example John Mark's mother, who used her home in which to entertain Christians. Ananias kept back a part of the money received for his land while pretending to have brought it all. His wife was a partner in it. They wanted the honor of generosity without paying the price.

2. The judgment (vv. 3-10). Ananias allowed Satan to fill his heart and lied to the Holy Ghost in keeping back a part of the price of the land. It was most likely an acted lie. They were not under obligation to sell their land, or having sold it, to bring any of the money and place it in the common fund. Peter declared that they were absolutely free to do as they pleased with it. Love of praise is causing many today to make the same dreadful mistake. People are walking in the way of Ananias and Sapphira when they make a profession of religion for temporal gain and pleasure; or even preaching sermons not their own. Frequently men preach the sermons of Moody and Spurgeon without giving credit. Physical death was visited upon Ananias and Sapphira for their sins.

III. The Effect (vv. 11-16).

1. Great fear came upon the church, and upon all who heard of these things (v. 11). Irreverence is an outstanding sin of this age. The church should be recognized as holy—the very dwelling place of the Most High God.

2. Multitudes of men and women were added to the Lord (v. 14). This caused the fame of Peter to be spread far and wide, so that the people were anxious to come under his shadow. Were the holiness of the body of Christ recognized, there would be many coming for pardon and salvation.

3. The hypocrites did not dare to join (v. 13). It is interesting to note that this vindication of the holiness of the church did not deter any but hypocrites from joining it. Nothing unhallowed nor any unregenerate person has a place in the church. This applies to our offerings as well as to our person.

Daily Prayer.

Oh Lord, we thank thee that men turn to thee; the measure of their need is the measure of thy supply. Let thy spirit dwell in our spirits, and then all shall be well within and peaceful without. We pray thee to give us a fuller and firmer, and more continual, and more vigorous and efficacious confidence in thyself. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

FARM FLOCKS IN CONTESTS

Demonstration to Show How Proper Management Will Increase Egg Production.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Something different in egg-laying contests is being carried on in Missouri this year. Instead of a few selected fowls competing under the care of experts, whole flocks of hens on the home farm and under the care of their owners are matched against similar flocks in all parts of the state. This is not only a contest to see which hens can lay the most eggs, the extension specialists say, but is also a demonstration to show how proper management will increase the egg production and profits of the farm flock.

The plan is to have one poultry keeper in each community of the various counties enter the contest. The contestants agree to care for their entire poultry flock as nearly as possible according to directions furnished by the poultry-extension workers through the office of the farm bureau. At the end of each month each contestant is to report expenses and income from his flock for the month. This plan will stimulate better methods of poultry management by demonstrating on a typical farm in the neighborhood the results which can be secured by proper care of the flock.

According to reports of the extension workers, 37 farm flocks are entered in the contest, with an average of 155 hens to the farm. In February the hens in the contest averaged 8.1 eggs. The value of eggs to the farm amounted to $32.08, the cost of feed per farm $18.17, and the average net profit $13.91. In the four months, November, December, January and February, eggs valued at $100.58 were produced on each farm at a cost for feed of $73.50 for each farm. White Leghorns averaged 25 eggs for the four months and led all breeds in egg yields.

The highest record in a similar contest held in the state last year was made by N. P. Hollar, living near Harding, who secured an average production of 140 eggs from a flock of 480 birds.

POULTRY NOTES

A dust bath is necessary to the health and profitability of the hen.

Skim milk is a very efficient feed for producing eggs.

The laying hen has a bright red comb and a brilliant sheen about the feathers.

An important factor in keeping the chicks growing during hot weather is plenty of shade.

Dust baths for the fowls to wallow in whenever they wish is one way of checking lice.

Disease brought about by filth, malnutrition and neglect is a good way to make a failure in the poultry business.

In marketing turkeys it pays to have them well fattened and well dressed, so they will look better than the average.

Tame, quiet hens of the larger breeds such as Plymouth Rocks and Orpingtons, make the best turkey mothers.

The poultry breeder should be very sure that the chicks are getting all they need, for trouble and disaster follow faulty feeding.

The poultry house should be built as low as possible without danger of the attendants' bumping their heads against the ceiling. A low house is more easily warmed than a high one.

There are many advantages to a single-pitch roof on the poultry house. This type is most easily built. It gives the highest vertical front exposed to the sun's rays, and grows all of the

"THRILLER" MOVIES.

Bedford County people will be interested in the bill which is pending in the U. S. Senate to bar from all forms of interstate transportation motion pictures that depict scenes of horror and crime much frequented by children. The Gazette believes this measure deserves thoughtful consideration. It aims at an undeniable evil. The motion picture industry has thrived to a point of great prosperity, through its appeal to the public along wholesome lines of entertainment and instruction. It does not need the "blood and thunder" features that have in the past been furnished in great numbers. Much of the juvenile delinquency of today, which is the cause of grave anxiety to parents and of serious concern to authorities charged with the preservation of the peace, is unquestionably due to the mind of stories of robbery and slaying and other crimes, vividly depicted upon the screen without discrimination. The "bad man" heroized is a malevolent character to show the youngsters, and if this pending bill can keep him from circulating among the thousands of movie houses, with their hundreds of thousands of patrons, it will have served well for public morals.

JOHN SMITH AND POCAHONTAS.

The first romance of love, of which we have any acquaintance, on the American continent was that between the gallant Captain John Smith, of the Virginia Colony, and Pocahontas, a daughter of the proud and mighty chief Powhatan, the head of 30 Indian tribes. The result of this attachment was a deception practiced upon the young Indian girl after she had saved the life of her lover.

The termination of the romance was the wedding of Pocahontas to John Rolfe, another one of the settlers, in April of 1614; and this marriage is of special interest to Americans in its termination, at least for a long period, the hostilities between the American aborigines and the white men.

In fact, the Virginia colony owes its preservation to this courageous little Indian princess, as well as to her saving the life of Smith. It is undoubted that Pocahontas was devoted to the handsome young Englishman, which is particularly proven in the fact that when he went back to England, the Indian girl lost all interest in the colony and neither returned to it or sent it aid.

History leaves vague the fact as to whether Smith reciprocated the love of Pocahontas, but it is very clear that he made good use of it to assist his suffering fellow Englishmen. It is quite likely that he did not, although the Indian girl remained faithful until death.

When John Smith returned to England, Pocahontas' heart went with him and when word came that he was dead, she was inconsolable. The English colonists worked on this love by trying again to gain her consent to marry John Rolfe. They succeeded and after a typical wedding of those days, the pair went to London and while there Pocahontas learned that she had been deceived through coming face to face with Smith.

When Pocahontas recognized him, and realized that she had been deceived she threw her arms about his neck and was so overcome with joy as to entirely forget the stiff court etiquette into which she had been so carefully drilled. Rolfe decided to take his wife away from such surroundings and prepared to return to Virginia, but Pocahontas pined away and died before she was again to see her native land.

Homesickness was given as a reason for the sudden decline of Pocahontas, but those who knew affirmed that she died of a broken heart when she discovered that the man whose life she saved, and whom she supposed dead, was actually alive and that she had no right to love him as before.

Rolfe had fallen in love with Pocahontas after she had been captured by the English who attempted to convert her to the Christian faith. When she realized that Smith was dead she seemed much attached to him, even if she did not return his deep passion with equal fervor. For two years following her marriage she was instructed by Rolfe and others in all the arts and graces which would become an English lady of title. She was presented at court by Lady Deleware, and she became the rage of London, whose beauty and gallants went fairly mad over the tawny beauty of "La Belle Sauvage," as she was called.

USE OF FRUIT AS FOOD

In most families fruits are commonly thought of as a food accessory and are prized for their pleasant flavor or for supposed hygienic reasons rather than for their food value; yet a study of available figures shows that they constitute a by no means unimportant part of the diet. Besides emphasizing the importance of fruit in the diet, this booklet contains a table showing the composition and nutritive values of all the common fruits.

You may obtain a copy of this booklet free by asking for F. B. 293, addressing the Division of Publications, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

REPORT OF CIVIC CLUB MEETING OF JANUARY 12.

The last meeting of the Civic Club Organization in the assembly room of the Trust Building was one of great interest to all present. After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting and hearing reports of committees, several matters were placed before the Club for discussion and plans made for interesting work of value that will be revealed in later reports throughout the winter.

After these items were dismissed from the floor, the ever burning question of Bedford's Water Supply was again on the carpet. The members of the Borough Council were unable to attend as scheduled. The meeting, however, proved to be a great success in attending to other business, and very pleasant socially, also, an unusual amount of humor was afforded. The gentlemen of the Council missed a great treat. But the ladies concluded to forgive their absence on this occasion, if they decide to be present when again cordially invited to attend. In the meantime, the ladies of the Civic Club are apt to make repeated visits to the door of their den in pursuit of "little drops of water, little grains of sand" as they shall hope to never change their song to—"Water, water, everywhere but not a drop to drink." Miss Ruth Morgart gave an interesting reading in round rolling Italian. "You plays da music, I getta da mon," after which a collection of "mun" was received.

The meeting was honored by the presence of three gentlemen. While few in number, they represented a host in themselves in their fine spirit of citizenship and community patriotism. These gentlemen expressed themselves with thoughtful seriousness on the question in hand, but joined the humor of the occasion with most enjoyable favor.

The Club received a courteous letter of explanation from Emory D. Claar of the Borough Council. This letter was read by Captain A. I. Lyon to an audience of about fifty representative citizens. The Reservoir subject was then discussed. Questions asked and opinions expressed. We cannot quote the full data of Mr. Claar's letter here but make the following extract: "By the time of your next meeting I will know something more definite in regard to plans of Council on the water question. At this time we are communicating with Harrisburg to secure permission to maintain and use a small catch-basin below 'Todd' Reservoir. The Dept. of Health has been withholding its permission to use said basin, not on account of any impurity in the supply but they seem to think that we ought to take immediate steps to concrete the 'Todd' Reservoir. This, of course, would be an excellent thing to do provided we had the necessary funds, estimated at $75,500.00.

At this point the assemblage caught its breath and halted with a practically unanimous chorus (uttered or expressed) "It cannot be done. Bedford cannot burden herself with $75,500.00 to line the 'Todd' Reservoir with concrete."

Shirley C. Hulse was then invited to come forward as a target for questions. He stood the bombardment with smiling heroism. Besides answering questions with his usual intelligent skill, Mr. Hulse reviewed the situation along the lines given in his talk at the last meeting. He then repeated, as before, his opinion on finding and mending the leakage outlets in the "Todd" Reservoir. Mr. Hulse gives his opinions with great modesty but is none the less convincing. Through experience and knowledge, he expresses every confidence in the success of this project which is at once the simplest and most practical; and has also the tremendous advantage of costing less than $1000.00 as against $75,500.00 (take notice). The plan is worth trying from many standpoints. Mr. Hulse not only takes a sane and unselfish and rational view of this matter, but he has the vision and instinct of the true builder,—one who begins with the simple and works toward the complex. Why talk about big, unnecessary plans that involve expense too heavy to carry when a more simple, feasible and less costly plan lies within reach? This may sound like a kindergarten idea and it is; but it is also a basic principle.

Shall we not mend the leaks? It is suggested by good authority that it can be done. If this fails (and we are assured it cannot fail entirely) is it not then time enough to develop other plans for the betterment of defective water supply such as our beautifully situated Bedford has been so unfortunate as to possess for many years. Every citizen has been given an opportunity to express his knowledge, opinion or investigation on this subject.

Be a Booster! Come out again in the open and speak!

"Little drops of water, little grains of sand, Make the mighty ocean and the beautiful land."

HONEY USES AND BEE KEEPING

This booklet which is issued by the States Relations Service deals with the ingredients of honey, its food value and wholesomeness, and the uses of honey in cooking. Besides its uses for the table, honey is delicious used in cooking to replace all or part of the sugar called for by a recipe. The other booklets deal with bee keeping and the winter treatment of the hives.

ADOPTS STATE BUDGET PLAN

New System is Proposed by Committee For Handling State Finances

WOULD ABOLISH ALL FEES

Interesting News Items, Briefly Condensed, Picked Up at the Departments, Which Are of Interest to the People of the State.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The Commission on Constitutional Amendment and Revision, sitting as the Committee of the Whole, adopted a state budget system, declared in favor of the abolition of all fees for state, county, municipal and all other officers and gave serious consideration to the devising of a system to eliminate, or regulate the appropriation of the money of the state to charitable and educational institutions not controlled by the commonwealth.

The abolition of fees will strike at all officials, including the various high-priced tax collectors scattered about the State. A straight salary basis will have to be worked out for every official, and all fees will go into the treasury.

The establishment of a budget system is a new step for Pennsylvania. While its expenditures total more than $100,000,000 for the present two-year fiscal period, there is no systematic method employed in the handling of the legislative end of the problem. If the plan adopted is finally made a part of the fundamental law, it will provide that not later than March 1 of the year in which the Legislature meets, the Governor will submit to the General Assembly a budget giving a complete plan for the proposed expenditures and estimated revenues of the two-year period, including expenditures for charitable and educational purposes. With it the Governor will send in a bill carrying all of these appropriations and any revenue bills he may have to suggest. The Legislature would have power to increase decrease, strike out, or otherwise alter any item in the appropriation bill or add new items.

53 Convicted of Arson Last Year. Investigations of 353 fires made during the past year by the state fire marshals department resulted in convictions for arson in 53 cases and 14 acquittals after trials.

Twelve accused persons are awaiting trial and two have fled the state. In 94 suspected cases the evidence was not strong enough to start prosecutions. There were over 10,000 fires reported in the state and the investigations were made outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh which have their own inspection system. Sixty-six cases are now under investigation.

Good Drinks Made of Milk.

"Good Drinks Made of Milk" is the title of a little booklet issued by the Dairy Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. It contains receipts for making drinks which the department says are "kickless" but full of punch. If you like milk you will probably enjoy these new milk drinks.

HOW TO SELECT FOODS

This booklet on the selection of food discusses briefly those principles of nutrition which the housekeeper should understand in order to plan meals wisely and economically. It does not attempt to give definite suggestions for obtaining foods at low cost but deals with food materials which are rich in protein and tells why the body needs this nutrient and how it is supplied by the different foods.

Readers of the Gazette may obtain a copy of this booklet free by asking for F. B. 824, addressing the Division of Publications, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Do not enclose return postage.

BUYING OR SELLING EGGS BY PARCEL POST

The practicability of shipping eggs by parcel post is demonstrated by the fact that more parcels of eggs than of any other one product pass through the mails. This booklet deals with methods of packing, containers, parcel post zones, and many other details which persons who would like to buy or sell their eggs by this method should know.

You may obtain a copy of this booklet free by asking for F. B. 830, addressing your request to the Division of Publications, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

PATRIOTS WANTED

Mrs. Maude R. Tarlay, of Chicago a member of the War Price Commission, suggests that in order to combat the high cost of living people should quit eating $1 a dozen eggs as well as withstand the temptation of investing in expensive fur coats.

"Watch the prices tumble if you do," says Mrs. Tarlay. Attorney General Palmer advocates something along the same line without drawing particular attention to the sealskin coat or the mink scarf. He adds that 10 per cent more work would make prices tumble 20 per cent.

Well and good. The Gazette agrees with them both, but when certain rumblings occur below the wishbone we will probably eat eggs or other food as precious, if we have the price. Hunger is no respecter of cost. It seems however, that something equally as persuasive as the suggestions brought out by Mr. Palmer and Mrs. Tarlay might be tried. For instance an appeal to patriotism. Every citizen admits that patriotism and profiteering are not synonymous. No one wants to be called a profiteer and we all swell up with pride when our patriotism is spoken of. At present there could be no greater loyalty to country than to trim our profits to a minimum.

POULTRY HOUSES.

This booklet which is issued by the Bureau of Animal Industry deals with poultry houses particularly houses for a small flock. Poultry houses should be dry, well ventilated, free from drafts, with plenty of sunshine and room enough to allow the birds to move about.

WHO SHOULD CONTROL THE RAILROADS FOR THE FUTURE?

Opinions differ widely but a free discussion of the question from both sides is the proper plan and one which all sides should sanction. First let us observe there need be no rush either way, for the roads are getting very fair dividend and the operating expense is actually turning to a net gain in spite of the fearful handicaps which under real Public Ownership would be eliminated.

In the "Good old days of Private Control" there was not a good locomotive in reserve storage. A hundred and forty-five thousand freight cars were stalled in helpless congestion. In 1916 the Interstate Commerce Commission reported that the transportation failure and added as a result "millions have shut down, prices have advanced, perishable goods destroyed, hundreds of car loads of food products delayed and transportation service thrown into unprecedented confusion. The general equipment was little more than junk, is common knowledge. More than 50 per cent of the 2,000,000 railroad employees were getting $75.00 and less per month. But listen, see real graft; 75 roads were getting operating revenue of $10,000,000 and over yearly; 105 were getting from $1,000,000 up to $10,000,000 and a hundred of smaller roads less than a million a year. What went with this immense toll from the public? Here is a hint of it: Space will only allow to name the salaries of a few Presidents and chairmen of these hundreds of railroads of the U. S.

E. M. Lovett, Union Pacific, $104,000; E. P. Ripley, A. T. Santa Fe, $70,400; Marvin Hewitt, Chicago Northern, $60,400; A. J. Earling, Chicago Minn. and St. Paul, $75,319; Samuel Rea, P. R. R., $75,000; A. H. Smith, N. Y. C., $78,360; E. B. Thomas, Lehigh Valley, $50,880; Fairfax Harrison, Southern, $50,500; W. H. Meyers, Vice Pres. P. R. R., $35,200; L. B. Johnson, Norfolk and Western, $60,090; W. W. Aterbury, Vice Pres. P. R. R., $40,000; J. Kruttschnitt, Southern, $88,860; Walter D. Hines, Atchison, $77,210; now as Director Gen. of all. He gets only $25,000. J. M. Dickinson, receiver, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, $120,723; Underwood, Erie, $77,950; Hill, Great Northern, $50,000 and hundreds more from $20,000 to $75,000. All that time and now and forever, amen, we have paid big dividends on six to eight billions of watered stock and will continue to do so if we turn the roads back to the corporations as they desire. Such in part were the "good old days" for which some are asking today, forgetful that the Government assumed control only after traffic was paralyzed by the incompetence of private management and greed, and hope of successful participation in the war made Government action unavoidable. We should now realize that in taking over such a junk shop immediate excessive costs for repairs and constructions were inevitable, because of the war and prices, but specially because these matters of expense were largely in the control of a lot of these railroads heads who were less patriotic than Mr. Hines or Mr. McAdoo, and they seem to enjoy trying to cripple the Government in that crucial hour when our boys were making such supreme sacrifices. Talk of "sabotage" and "direct action", charged against labor. Enough has come to light to prove the sabotage of labor a mere pigmy compared to the disgraceful sabotage of these superpatriots who, instead of honestly helping their Government that was dealing so liberally toward them, were using every sabotage device to discredit real public ownership before the people in that time of dire need, and are still at it. If our officials had gotten after these anarchists of wealth they possibly would have less trouble with the anarchists of poverty.

We speak of the big deficit that the Government has to meet and forget that even though we do pay the private owners for the use of their roads, $550,000,000 net more than we got out in operating revenue for the two years past, that it is possibly one of the biggest bargains for us financially during the war, when we consider what we would have had to pay the railroads in transportation charges for the two years, had they been able to have furnished the transportation, which all concede they could not. We should remember that in this time rates were only raised from 25 per cent to 44 per cent by the Government, a trifle compared with everything else. And yet a large increase in employee wages, which was right, and padded payrolls and useless number of extra employees, which was wrong, in spite of which we have evidently fared better than under private ownership, when they already are asking for increased rates as soon as they again get the roads and a guaranty of big dividends not only on actual investment but also on billions of water, and which the Cummins bill grants them. From July to November 1918 135,000 more cars of grain alone were handled under Government control than in the same months in 1917 under private control. In October 1919 the railroads transported a larger amount of freight than during any other corresponding period in the nation's history due to the increasing efficiency of unified operation of freight cars. I believe that from an honest comparison of the past and present methods there will be universal demand to continue Government operation for at least two years more of peace time tests. Get this, that railroads are a public necessity, just as much as our wagon and motor roads, and must be run for public use and not for private gain. Who wants to turn the Lincoln Way and the Postal Service back to private control? I trust your columns will be open to both sides, if so more later.

A. C. Richards.

THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT

Further attacks upon the eighteenth amendment providing for Federal prohibition and upon the act of enforcement are planned, one by the state of New Jersey similar to the suit brought by the state of Rhode Island, and another by New Jersey brewing corporation. They assert that the Volstead act is unconstitutional and that it takes away private property without compensation and that the eighteenth amendment is itself unconstitutional. As we view the situation there is but one issue in this matter before the Supreme Court, and that is whether the eighteenth amendment has been fully ratified. If that court holds that the adoption of ratifying resolutions by thirty-six of the State legislatures constitutes approval under the constitutional provision for changing the national organic act, the case is ended, no matter how many states enter suits or how many ingenious pleas are advanced in behalf of private interests. The validity of the Volstead act itself will be determined by the Supreme Court on the 5th of January, but not until that date will arguments be heard on the major question of whether the eighteenth amendment is now rightfully the law of the land, taking effect eleven days later.

AS A COLD SPECTATOR

What is regarded as the greatest peace treaty in the history of the world was formally put into effect yesterday.

Thanks to the petty hate and jealousy at home, the Nation that made possible the victory and led in the shaping of peace was denied participation in the historic ceremony and made to appear as a cold spectator.

For the moment the cynicism of Henry Cabot Lodge had triumphed over the warm-hearted idealism of the American people as represented by Woodrow Wilson.

But it is only for the moment. The people who sent their boys to fight in the spirit of crusaders for humanity and who poured out their wealth in a never ending stream for the cause will not long endure the Machiavellian attitude of the Republicans in the Senate who have been sneering at every hope of the people for a plan to prevent war and have done their utmost to kill it. Gleehearts like the average American want no isolation from the works of the new day.

Republican leadership will have to answer to the American people for denying this Nation its rightful place in the launching of the great treaty of Versailles.

OWN STORY

as the lowest we should think of and is placed no higher because the limit of available transportation would not seem to warrant it.

"A study of transportation facilities shows sufficient American tonnage to bring over this number of troops, but to do so there must be a reduction in the tonnage allotted to other than army needs. The use of shipping for commercial purposes must be curtailed as much as possible. The allies are very weak and we must come to their relief this year 1918. The year after may be too late. It is very doubtful if they can hold on until 1919 unless we give them a lot of support this year. It is therefore strongly recommended that a complete readjustment of transportation be made and that the needs of the war department as set forth above be regarded as immediate."

In the latter part of January joint note No. 12, presented by the military representatives with the supreme war council, was approved by the council. This note concluded that France would be safe during 1918 only under certain conditions, namely:

"That the strength of the British and French troops in France are continuously kept up to their present total strength and that they receive the expected reinforcements of not less than two American divisions per month."

The first German offensive of 1918, beginning March 31, overran all resistance during the initial period of the attack. The offensive made such inroads upon French and British reserves that defeat stared them in the face unless the new American troops should prove more immediately available than even the most optimistic had dared to hope. On March 27 the military representatives with the supreme war council prepared their joint note No. 18. This note repeated the previously quoted statement from joint note No. 12, and continued:

"The battle which is developing at the present moment in France, and which can extend to the other theaters of operations may very quickly place the allied armies in a serious situation from the point of view of effectiveness."

"The military representatives are of the opinion that it is highly desirable that the American government should assist the allied armies as soon as possible by permitting in principle the temporary service of American units in allied army corps and divisions. Such reinforcements must, however, be obtained from other units than those American divisions which are now operating with the French, and the units so temporarily employed must eventually be returned to the American army."

"The military representatives are of the opinion that from the present time in execution of the foregoing, and until otherwise directed by the supreme war council, only American infantry and machine gun units, organized as that government may decide, be brought to France, and that all agreements or conventions hitherto made in conflict with this decision be modified accordingly."

Planned an American Army.

The secretary of war, who was in France at the time; General Bliss, the American military representative with the supreme war council, and I at once conferred on the terms of this note, with the result that the secretary recommended to the president that joint note No. 18 be approved in the following sense:

"The purpose of the American government is to render the fullest co-operation and aid, and therefore the recommendation of the military representatives with regard to the preferential transportation of American infantry and machine gun units in the present emergency is approved. Such units, when transported, will be under the direction of the commander in chief of the American expeditionary forces, and will be assigned for training and use by him in his discretion. He will use these and all other military forces of the United States under his command in such manner as to render the greatest military assistance, keeping in mind always the determination of this government to have its varied military forces collected as speedily as their training and the military situation permits, into an independent American army, acting in concert with the armies of Great Britain and France and all arrangements made by him for their temporary training and service will be made with that end in view."

British Losses Heavy.

The battle line in the vicinity of Amiens had hardly stabilized when on April 9, the Germans made another successful attack against the British lines on a front of some 40 kilometers in the vicinity of Arras and along the Lys river. As a result of its being included in a salient formed by the German advance, Passchendaele ridge, the capture of which had cost so dearly in 1917, was evacuated by the British on April 17.

The losses had been heavy and the British were unable to face them entirely. They were the first making any effort to increase the number of troops available for the offensive.

The British were unable to face them entirely. They were the first making any effort to increase the number of troops available for the offensive.

France up to six divisions and that any shipping in excess of that required for these troops be utilized to transport troops necessary to make these divisions complete.

"That the American personnel of the artillery of these divisions and such corps troops as may be required to build up American corps organizations follow immediately thereafter, and that American artillery personnel be trained with French material and join its proper divisions as soon as thoroughly trained."

"That it is contemplated American divisions and corps when trained and organized shall be utilized under the American commander in chief in an American group."

"That the American commander in chief shall allot American troops to the French or British for training or train them with American units at his discretion, with the understanding that troops already transported by British shipping or included in the six divisions mentioned are to be trained with the British army."

At a meeting of the supreme war council held at Abbeville May 1 and 2, an urgent appeal came from both French and Italian representatives for American replacements or units to serve with their armies. The following agreement was reached, committing the council to an independent American army and providing for the immediate shipment of certain troops:

Under American Flag.

"It is the opinion of the supreme war council that, in order to carry the war to a successful conclusion, an American army should be formed as early as possible under its own flag. In order to meet the present emergency it is agreed that American troops should be brought to France as rapidly as allied transportation facilities will permit, and that, as far as consistent with the necessity of building up an American army, preference will be given to infantry and machine-gun units for training and service with French and British armies."

The next offensive of the enemy was made between the Oise and Berry-aux-Bac against the French instead of against the British, as was generally expected, and it came as a complete surprise. The initial Aisne attack, covering a front of thirty-five kilometers, met with remarkable success, as the German armies advanced no less than fifty kilometers in four days. On reaching the Marne that river was used as a defensive flank and the German advance was directly towards Paris. During the first days of June something akin to a panic seized the city and it was estimated that 1,000,000 people left during the spring of 1918.

Such extensive priority had already been given to the transport of American infantry and machine gun units that the troops of those categories which had received even partial training in the United States were practically exhausted. Moreover, the strain on our services of supply made it essential that early relief be afforded by increasing its personnel. The final agreement was cabled to the war department on June 5, as follows:

"The following recommendations are made on the assumption that at least 250,000 men can be transported in each of the months of June and July by the employment of combined British and American tonnage. We recommend:

"For the month of June: Absolute priority shall be given to the transportation of 170,000 combatant troops, 25,400 men for the service of the railways, the balance to be troops of categories to be determined by the commander-in-chief, American expeditionary forces."

"For the month of July: Absolute priority for the shipment of 140,000 combatant troops, the balance to consist of troops to be designated by the commander-in-chief, American expeditionary forces."

"We recognize that the combatant troops to be dispatched in July may have to include troops which have had insufficient training, but we consider the present emergency is such as to justify a temporary and exceptional departure by the United States from sound principles of training, especially as a similar course is being followed by France and Great Britain."

"Signed FOCH."

"MILNER."
"PERSHING."

Raised Delicate Questions.

The various proposals during these conferences regarding priority of shipment, often very insistent, raised questions that were not only most difficult but most delicate. On the one hand, there was a critical situation which must be met by immediate action, while, on the other hand, any priority accorded a particular arm necessarily postponed the formation of a distinctive American fighting force and the means to supply it. Such a force was, in my opinion, absolutely necessary to win the war. A few of the allied representatives became convinced that the American services of supply should not be neglected but should be developed in the common interest. The success of our divisions during May and June demonstrated fully that it was not necessary to draft Americans under foreign flags in order to utilize American combat most effectively.

When on March 21, 1918, the German army on the Aisne front began operations of attack, it was by far the most serious that the world has known. In high numbers and with a great superiority but with less importance than the experience in the past, it was coming for mobile warfare and the command. Ever since the collapse of the Russian armies and the risks on the Italian front in the fall of 1917 German armies were being assembled and trained for the great campaign which was to end the war before America's effort could be brought to bear. Germany's best troops, her most successful generals and all the experience gained in three years of war were mobilized for the supreme effort.

The first blow fell on the right of the British armies, including the junction of the British and French forces. Only the prompt co-operation of the French and British general headquarters stemmed the tide. The reason for this objective was obvious, and strikingly illustrated the necessity for having some one with sufficient authority over all the allied armies to meet such an emergency.

Reserves Were Lacking.

The lack of complete co-operation among the allies on the western front had been appreciated and the question of preparation to meet a crisis had already received attention by the supreme war council. A plan had been adopted by which each of the allies would furnish a certain number of divisions for a general reserve to be under the direction of the military representatives of the supreme war council, of which Gen. Foch was then the senior member. But when the time came to meet the German offensive in March these reserves were not found available and the plan failed.

The situation resulted in a conference for the immediate consideration of the question of having an allied commander in chief. After much discussion, during which my view favoring such action was clearly stated, an agreement was reached and General Foch was selected. His appointment as such was made April 3 and was approved for the United States by the president on April 16.

The grave crisis precipitated by the first German offensive caused me to make a hurried visit to General Foch's headquarters at Compiègne, during which all our combatant forces were placed at his disposal. The acceptance of this offer meant the dispersion of our troops along the allied front and a consequent delay in building up a distinctive American force in Lorraine, but the serious situation of the allies demanded this divergence from our plans.

On March 21 approximately 800,000 American troops had reached France. Four combat divisions, equivalent in strength to eight French or British divisions, were available.

Took Cantigny Heights.

On April 25 the First division relieved two French divisions on the front near Montdidier and on May 28 captured the important observation stations on the heights of Cantigny with splendid dash. French artillery, aviation, tanks and flame throwers aided in the attack, but most of this French assistance was withdrawn before the completion of the operation in order to meet the enemy's new offensive launched May 27 to Chateau Thierry. The enemy reaction against our troops at Cantigny was extremely violent, and apparently he was determined at all costs to counteract the most excellent effect the American success had produced. For three days his guns of all calibers were concentrated on our position and counter-attack succeeded counter-attack. The desperate efforts of the Germans gave the fighting at Cantigny a seeming tactical importance entirely out of proportion to the numbers involved.

The third German offensive, on May 27, against the French on the Aisne soon developed a desperate situation for the allies. The Second division was hastily diverted to the vicinity of Meaux on May 31, and early on the morning of June 1 was deployed across the Chateau-Thierry-Paris road near Montreuil-aux-Lions in a gap in the French line, where it stopped the German advance on Paris. At the same time the partially trained Third division was placed at French disposal to hold the crossings of the Marne, and its motorized machine-gun battalion succeeded in reaching Chateau Thierry in time to assist in successfully defending that river crossing.

The enemy having been halted, the Second division commenced a series of vigorous attacks on June 4 which resulted in the capture of Belleau woods after very severe fighting. The village of Buresches was taken soon after, and on July 1 Vaux was captured. In these operations the Second division met with most desperate resistance by Germany's best troops. Our Second corps, under Maj. Gen. George W. Read, had been organized for the command of the ten divisions with the British, which were held back in training areas or assigned to second-line defenses. After consultation with Field Marshal Haig on June 3 five American divisions were relieved from the British area to support the French.

The Marne salient was inherently weak and offered an opportunity for a counter-offensive that was obvious. If successful such an operation would afford immediate relief to the allied defense, would remove the threat against Paris and free the Paris-Nancy railroad. But more important than all else, it would restore the morale of the allies and remove the profound depression and fear then existing.

Up to this time our units had been put in here and there at critical points as emergency troops to stop the terrible German advance. In every trial, whether of the defensive or of the offensive, they had proved themselves equal to any task in Europe. As early as June 10 and again on July 10 at Compiègne they strongly urged that our divisions be concentrated, under American command if possible, for a striking force against the Marne salient. Although the preparation among the allies was th

Gape Allsop has read of a man up East who is working on and trying to invent some kind of a contrivance which can be attached to the nose and will take food from the air sufficient to sustain the body. Gape says he would like to get hold of one of the machines and try it out on Zero Heck's mule, as the mule is going to starve to death anyway.

The Hopewell Baseball team will probably be reorganized next season and several new rules will be adopted. One of the most important will be that when the umpire calls a man "out" he will be out without any further argument, and another rule that is being considered is to give all runners the right to take their positions on the bases held when the third man was retired in a previous inning, as this will make the game more encouraging for the players.

THE "BIG FIVE" CASE

The criticism aimed at Attorney General Palmer for agreeing to the proposal of the packers to reorganize their business upon a basis satisfactory to the Government and in the public interest is a partisan waddle. Mr. Palmer stated to a congressional committee that the Government by this agreement secures all the advantages that it could hope to secure through a court decree, and more, it will maintain them perpetually. Until that statement can be denied, the course of the Department of Justice must be regarded by all fair and unprejudiced people in every community as a victory for the Government instead of a "surrender" as it has been dubbed by certain political opponents.

A private citizen, suing in the courts, would be regarded as insane if he refused a settlement by his opponent for the full amount asked and persisted in bringing the cases to trial. The same is true of the Government.

When the Attorney General's critics are able to prove that he sacrificed the interests of the public through inefficiency or unworthy motives by agreeing to the packers' proposition the case stands as a victory for the people and the removal of a source of much irritation during a long period of years.

How To Build Bird Houses.

Birds may be gathered about us in all seasons of the year with ease and certainty merely by offering what they desire. In winter they are often pushed for food, and if we supply this need they will report daily at the lunch counter and thus help relieve the tedium of our indoor life. In spring and summer, what the birds most want is a home and for that purpose this booklet is written. It gives designs of many kinds of simple home made bird houses and it is none too early to begin to make a few if you want a little family of blue birds or other song birds around your place this spring.

Back-Yard Poultry Keeping

The keeping of a small flock of laying hens on a town or city lot is an important branch of poultry keeping. Though the value of the product from each flock is large, the eggs and fowls from such a flock may be produced at a relatively low cost, because of the possibility of utilizing table scraps and kitchen waste which otherwise would be thrown away.

This booklet tells about the kind of a flock to keep, procuring the stock, housing, feeding, and preserving the excess eggs.

Readers of the Gazette may obtain a copy of this booklet free by addressing the Division of Publications, Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and asking for F. R. 220.
